A Message from Dr. Keith Johnson, Vice President for Equity and Inclusion

“Beyond 'Checking a Box:' Building and Sustaining
Campus-Wide Engagement for Belonging through the Annual Equity and Inclusion Conference ”

Dear Friends,

We are only a couple of weeks away from our fifth annual Equity & Inclusion conference at East Tennessee State University, scheduled September 28-30.

The conference was an extension of the vision that I had when I first began serving as your Vice President for Equity and Inclusion at ETSU. For the first conference, I had just a few months of planning, and was really pushed for time to pull together a dynamic team who could help me make the conference a reality.

Each year the conference has grown and proudly hosted many highly accomplished keynote speakers including: Wes Moore, Michael Eric Dyson, and Dr. Paul Farmer. And this year we are hosting critically acclaimed author, Imani Perry- who is renowned for her work exploring the intersections of history, race, law, and culture.

During the pandemic, we learned many creative ways to deliver classroom instructions, conduct virtual meetings, master dynamic forms, deliver hands-on laboratory experiences and deliver a virtual Equity and Inclusion conference with just under 500 registrants. We moved from on-ground, to virtual, to hybrid, to now back to on-ground without missing a beat. I hope you enjoy all of the networking opportunities and strategically planned learning sessions that this conference will provide.

For our readers outside of the university community, ETSU's story began in 1911 on land once owned by railroad magnate, George L. Carter. Our institutional foundation was as a normal school. More than a hundred years ago ETSU and the state of Tennessee sought to uplift the region through education. This goal helped to improve the life prospects of countless citizens in our region and beyond.

But many of our citizens, African Americans in particular, were left behind as de jure segregation prevented African Americans from enrolling at ETSU. Only court orders, especially Brown v. Board of Education, finally opened the door to integration. African American faculty at ETSU did not exist prior to mid-to-late 1970. And the institution struggled to hire and retain faculty well into the nineties.

By the end of the twentieth century ETSU increasingly reflected a rapidly changing world. ETSU's advancements began with racial diversity but later included gender diversity, sexual diversity, and ethnic diversity. And ETSU student body is more diverse today than at any other time in its longstanding history.

This conference is a celebration of our central institutional mission: to educate people without regard to race, gender, sexual orientation, or place of origin. Numerous breakout sessions have been built to discuss practical ways all faculty, staff, and administrators can improve and promote the ETSU's goal of being welcoming and accepting of everyone. Those lessons learned could be inferred to any college or university.

Further, this conference focuses on the basic humanity of every person and the reasonable expectation that every person deserves respect. Our focus this year is called: "Beyond Checking a Box: Building and Sustaining Campus-Wide Engagement for Belonging."

I encourage everyone to register for the conference because it truly has something planned for everyone. Please visit the conference website to explore the many sessions that are planned for our participants and learn how you can register.

ETSU is proud to host the annual Equity and Inclusion conference in our region. It is an institution that is striving to set the standard for celebrating all peoples, while at the same time spotlighting many who help us become a university that is increasingly inclusive. As we continue to move forward, it is important that the university continues to press onward with creating a campus environment that lives out the values of the university which include:

- PEOPLE come first, are treated with dignity and respect, and are encouraged to achieve their full potential;
- RELATIONSHIPS are built on honesty, integrity, and trust;
- DIVERSITY of people and thought is respected;
- EXCELLENCE is achieved through teamwork, leadership, creativity, and a strong work ethic;
- EFFICIENCY is achieved through wise use of human and financial resources; and
- COMMITMENT to intellectual achievement is embraced.

Sincerely,

Dr. Keith Johnson

ETSU's fifth annual Equity and Inclusion Conference will be held September 28-30, 2023. This year's conference theme is "Beyond 'Checking a Box:' Building and Sustaining Campus-Wide Engagement for Belonging."

Bestselling author Imani Perry to headline ETSU conference

Perry is renowned for her work that explores the intersections of history, race, law and culture. Born in Birmingham, Alabama, in the aftermath of the horrific 16th Street Baptist Church bombing, Perry's life and work have been deeply imbued with a commitment to justice and progressive change.

Perry's academic and literary contributions, including her National Book Award-winning work "South to America: A Journey Below the Mason-Dixon to Understand the Soul of a Nation," explores how the South shapes American history and culture. Her numerous accolades, including awards for her exploration of the life of underrecognized Black artist Lorraine Hansberry, firmly position her as a significant figure in contemporary literature and academia.

East Tennessee Higher Education Regional Alliance

USC Race and Equity Center

This professional learning series is for full-time and part-time employees at Alliance member institutions. Each month, nationally renowned equity experts will offer a highly-engaging live session via Zoom on a different racial equity topic. Useful tools and practical strategies will be provided in every synchronous three-hour experience. Every campus can send up to 400 employees to each session – it could be the same 400 people, or a different set each month. While there is no cost, advance registration is required for each individual session.
