Weâ€™ll be looking at important and characteristic works by these three masters of narrative technique, in part to understand the influence of Hemingway and Faulkner on McCarthy. The reading list will include Hemingwayâ€™s The Sun Also Rises, selections from Hemingwayâ€™s collected stories, the Finca Vigia edition, and Faulknerâ€™s The Unvanquished, As I Lay Dying, and Absalom, Absalom. Weâ€™ll begin our study of McCarthy with his first novel, The Orchard Keeper, and then continue with the Border Trilogy: All The Pretty Horses, The Crossing, and Cities of the Plain.

Eve: Culprit of man's fall or sweet mother of mankind? Women have been associated with these two roles since Genesis, but what about Eve? In this class we will explore the literary and artistic representations of Eve to enhance our understanding of misogyny and philogyny, as bases to our modern conception of womanhood. The readings will range from pre-biblical texts to modern poetry, from the Middle East to Europe and the United States. Join us in this cross-cultural and trans-historical examination of Eve (and the serpent, of course).

The Historical Film. History is a series of stories, defined and redefined by those who tell them over time from different social, cultural, and political positions. History, and our understanding of it, always involves an element of change and reinterpretation. This process is captured in images by the historical film—a film genre that can facilitate the process of critically reevaluating historical events or even make the case for a particular interpretation—and we will focus on how this genre participates in the process of history-making and history-remaking through the powerful medium of film. Course may be repeated for credit when content varies.

The Southern Gothic in literature, film, and television. The narrated South has long been a place redolent with decay, loss, and generally odd behavior. It is a place in which whimsical, frail, disturbing (and oftentimes disturbed) characters live out their dramas. It is a place of near death, death, and undead. This course will feature literature and film (and some television shows) that highlight aspects of Southern Gothic that make this sub-genre memorable for its vivid and sometimes grotesque extremes of human behavior. We will consider the cultural context and media stereotypes of Southern life and study the narrative structures that tell the story of the Gothic South. Authors include Edgar Allan Poe, William Faulkner, Flannery O'Connor, Tennessee Williams, Harper Lee, Carson McCullers, Erskine Caldwell, Cormac McCarthy, and others.

The connection between Shakespeare and America, from the colonial era to the twentieth century, will be the focus of this course. We begin as early as Cotton Mather, who bought a copy of Shakespeare's First Folio in Massachusetts, to William Byrd in Virginia, who had one on his shelf. George Washington possessed a collection of Shakespeare volumes at Mount Vernon, as did Thomas Jefferson at Monticello. After considering the founding fathers' reactions and responses to Shakespeare, we then look at numerous American literary figures and their engagement with the Bard, including Edgar Allen Poe, Walt Whitman, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Herman Melville, Mark Twain, and Willa Cather, among others. The course concludes with a section on twentieth-century adaptations of Shakespeare by Orson Welles, Paul Robeson, and Isaac Asimov.

Eve: Culprit of man's fall or sweet mother of mankind? Women have been associated with these two roles since Genesis, but what about Eve? In this class we will explore the literary and artistic representations of Eve to enhance our understanding of misogyny and philogyny, as bases to our modern conception of womanhood. The readings will range from pre-biblical texts to modern poetry, from the Middle East to Europe and the United States. Join us in this cross-cultural and trans-historical examination of Eve (and the serpent, of course).

The Southern Gothic in literature, film, and television. The narrated South has long been a place redolent with decay, loss, and generally odd behavior. It is a place in which whimsical, frail, disturbing (and oftentimes disturbed) characters live out their dramas. It is a place of near death, death, and undead. This course will feature literature and film (and some television shows) that highlight aspects of Southern Gothic that make this sub-genre memorable for its vivid and sometimes grotesque extremes of human behavior. We will consider the cultural context and media stereotypes of Southern life and study the narrative structures that tell the story of the Gothic South. Authors include Edgar Allan Poe, William Faulkner, Flannery O'Connor, Tennessee Williams, Harper Lee, Carson McCullers, Erskine Caldwell, Cormac McCarthy, and others.

19th Century Russian Literature.....From social issues and political intrigue, to the psychological and the philosophical, the vivid world of nineteenth-century Russian literature is often stark and beautiful, terrible and awe-inspiring. The nineteenth century was a time in which Russian literature underwent great changes as authors strove to define both their national literature and their own narodnostâ€”sense of self or national identityâ€”distinct from other European cultures and literary movements. Authors will include Pushkin, Gogol, Lermontov, Turgenev, Tur, Dostoevsky, and Tolstoy.
