"Sympathy, Empathy, and Leadership" This interdisciplinary course examines the importance of sympathy and empathy based on a recent groundswell of interest in empathy; CEO's, best-selling authors, and international leaders have identified empathy as one of the most important leadership skills of the 21st century. Generally understood as "the ability to understand and share the feelings of another," empathy will play an increasingly important role in our interdependent and hyper-connected world. Whether the challenge is to build a collaborative team, become a skilled professional, or advocate effectively for social justice, empathy is a vital leadership capacity.

BSTA-5350-995 is an internet-based, WebEx Video Streaming section. Students may log in to the live class using a computer at the time BSTA-5350-001 is scheduled. For minimum computer system requirements and additional information please go to <https://help.webex.com/docs/DOC-4748> (you will need to copy/paste the link). Please be advised that for the 995 section you may be required to take proctored exams at an approved testing center. Other requirements will be addressed by the professor. Recordings of each class session will be available via the course D2L page. Students wishing to attend a class-room section must enroll in BSTA-5350-001. It is encouraged that all students attend the on site section of this course. If any student wants to take this online section, please contact the instructor, Shimin Zheng in Lamb Hall, Room 46B G1 level or via a phone interview at 423-439-4327.

CSCI 1200-001 Arduino Programming Prerequisite: CSCI 1250. This course is intended for CSCI majors. Students will improve their working knowledge of problem solving, algorithm development, debugging strategies, and programming basics with the use of the Arduino Uno microcontroller and various sensors. Students taking this course will be required to purchase an Arduino Uno kit. Contact Mr. Schneider, schneidm@etsu.edu, with questions. A permit will be required to register for this course.

Embedded Systems. Prerequisites: CSCI 3110 or CSCI 3230. This course will introduce students to embedded systems design with a focus on the issues surrounding communication, input, and output mechanisms. It will address the special requirements, architectures, and implementations of embedded systems. Please contact Dave Tarnoff at tarnoff@etsu.edu for more information.

Artificial Intelligence. Prerequisites: CSCI 2210 or permission of the instructor. This course provides an introductory survey of Artificial Intelligence (AI), covering the history and theory of AI, and its associated algorithms. Basic concepts include an overview of AI; intelligent agents; problem solving and searching; knowledge, reasoning and planning; decision-making; machine learning; and emerging topics in AI. Topic exploration will involve programming components and brief written work, so good programming and communication skills are expected. For additional information, contact Dr. Brian Bennett at bennetbt@etsu.edu.

Last summer, I was driving with my father down Hollywood Boulevard in Los Angeles. As expected, there were swarms of people huddled along the sidewalks, taking photos and signing up for "See Movie Stars" tours. At one point my father observed, "All of these people are looking for something that's not here." He has lived in Los Angeles on and off for 15 years and has grown jaded with the city's charms. His words, though, did remind me of the lyrics from an old Gatlin Brothers song "All the Gold in California" which exclaims, "All the gold in California is in a bank in the middle of Beverly Hills in somebody else's name." The end point of America's Manifest Destiny, California has long been a place where people have traveled to reinvent themselves and seek the good life under stark blue skies. English 3128: California Dreaming: Literature of the Golden State will explore the ways in which poets and fiction writers have grappled with this hope of new beginnings set against the often harsh realities of living in an unforgiving landscape that possesses wide socio-economic disparities and an uncertain environmental future. We will read from a broad range of authors, including John Muir, John Steinbeck, Raymond Chandler, Chester Homes, Joan Didion, and Helena Maria Viramontes.

What do queer kids from Appalachia, women coal miners, and Freedom Riders have in common? They represent folks whose knowledge is often undervalued and stories are often neglected. In this course, we will uncover these and other stories left out of the canon as we reclaim diverse women's experiences, contextualize their lives, and bring critical attention to their work. Along the way, we will unpack power-knowledge and reframe how we do research. Our work together will necessitate practical conversations about how to get started and will prompt considerations such as how could we repurpose the archive as a site of grassroots organizing, movement building, social transformation, and radical inclusion? Texts we will examine will include personal diaries, letters, and recipe books; voices documented via new critical media and other platforms'blogs, StoryCorps, Country Queers, Inside Appalachia, digital libraries, zines; and photographs, film, and material artifacts. Field trips to the Highlander Center and the Archives of Appalachia will be part of the course experience. For more details, please email me at thomsop@etsu.edu.

This course explores themes about travel and place, whether around the globe or down the street. Wanderlust is strong at certain times in life, and these movies capture that desire to see what is beyond the ordinary and the everyday. No matter how one travels—along, with one other person, or with a group—the desire to see what's out there is common to us all. Among others, we will view Easy Rider, Out of Africa, Midnight in Paris, Y Tu Mamá; Tambiën, The Darjeeling Limited, Amélie, The Motorcycle Diaries, Thelma & Louise, and Indochine.

This course will provide an in-depth examination of the ways in which gender, sexuality, and race are constructed and portrayed within the U.S. contemporary popular culture. The course will interrogate the many ways communication shapes the creation, interpretation, and performance of gender. The course relies on an intersectional approach to examining gender in relation to sexism, racism, classism, heterosexism, and other forms of privilege. Each week, we will examine these forms of privilege through an array of media, including (but not limited to) film, television, music, advertisements, and gaming.

Prerequisite for GERM 4957: GERM 2020 or equivalent. Prerequisite for ENGL 4350: ENGL 1020 or equivalent. This course will provide an overview of the history of German cinema from the 1920s to the present. We will explore German culture and history in order to determine in how far the German cinematic tradition differs from other national cinemas. We will also examine the limits of national categorizations for cinema in a globalizing world. In addition to analyzing films, we will read and discuss a number of theoretical texts that will provide an aesthetic and cultural frame for interpretation. This class is taught in English.

This course is a cultural and intellectual history of the book, if by "book" we mean written texts in any medium including mud, stone, wax, papyrus—all of which pre-date the "book" as we know it. Our guides will be the major texts—such as the Epic of Gilgamesh, the works of Homer, the biblical testaments, and such lights of Latin poetry as Lucretius and Vergil—whose survival is a testament to the industry and ingenuity—as well as the luck of librarians, scribes and scholars from the Alexandrians to present-day scholars engaged in the digital preservation of ancient texts. This course offers a broad introduction to the discipline of Textual Criticism in its classical form—that is the determination of primacy, or authenticity, of ancient texts by study of the earliest extant witnesses in order to discover the "truest" version of that text—but also to more recent manifestations of textual study which are more pluralistic in their view of "authenticity." The course is required for students in the Classical Studies Minor (and can be taken for credit by those who have already taken a Special Topics course), and is open to all undergraduates and graduate students as an elective. No knowledge of Greek or Latin required.

This course is a cultural and intellectual history of the book, if by "book" we mean written texts in any medium including mud, stone, wax, papyrus—all of which pre-date the "book" as we know it. Our guides will be the major texts—such as the Epic of Gilgamesh, the works of Homer, the biblical testaments, and such lights of Latin poetry as Lucretius and Vergil—whose survival is a testament to the industry and ingenuity—as well as the "luck" of librarians, scribes and scholars from the Alexandrians to present-day scholars engaged in the digital preservation of ancient texts. This course offers a broad introduction to the discipline of Textual Criticism in its classical form—that is the determination of primacy, or authenticity, of ancient texts by study of the earliest extant witnesses in order to discover the "truest" version of that text—but also to more recent manifestations of textual study which are more pluralistic in their view of "authenticity." The course is required for students in the Classical Studies Minor (and can be taken for credit by those who have already taken a Special Topics course), and is open to all undergraduates and graduate students as an elective. No knowledge of Greek or Latin required.

Note: The professor invites students to contact him silver@etsu.edu to be granted access to the first module (from last summer's course). This will allow you to sample the narrated PPTs and coordinated materials. He will also provide a copy of last year's syllabus upon request. This year's will be available a few days before the beginning of Winter Term. ENVH 3040 W01 is being taught in a very highly accelerated format in winter term. A minimum of two modules will be covered each week. A module includes readings, discussion forum, study questions, and a quiz. (The format used in other semesters has typically been one module per week). Students should not take this course if they have more than one outside commitment such as: another course; a job; family care duties; etc. Ambitious travel is ill-advised. No deadlines will fall on Christmas Day or New Year's Day. However, deadlines may occur in the early afternoons on the respective "eves" of the holidays (i.e., 12/24 and 12/31).

Prerequisite for GERM 4957: GERM 2020 or equivalent. Prerequisite for ENGL 4350: ENGL 1020 or equivalent. This course will provide an overview of the history of German cinema from the 1920s to the present. We will explore German culture and history in order to determine in how far the German cinematic tradition differs from other national cinemas. We will also examine the limits of national categorizations for cinema in a globalizing world. In addition to analyzing films, we will read and discuss a number of theoretical texts that will provide an aesthetic and cultural frame for interpretation. This class is taught in English.

This course is a cultural and intellectual history of the book, if by "book" we mean written texts in any medium including mud, stone, wax, papyrus—all of which pre-date the "book" as we know it. Our guides will be the major texts—such as the Epic of Gilgamesh, the works of Homer, the biblical testaments, and such lights of Latin poetry as Lucretius and Vergil—whose survival is a testament to the industry and ingenuity—as well as the luck of librarians, scribes and scholars from the Alexandrians to present-day scholars engaged in the digital preservation of ancient texts. This course offers a broad introduction to the discipline of Textual Criticism in its classical form—that is the determination of primacy, or authenticity, of ancient texts by study of the earliest extant witnesses in order to discover the "truest" version of that text—but also to more recent manifestations of textual study which are more pluralistic in their view of authenticity. The course is required for students in the Classical Studies Minor (and can be taken for credit by those who have already taken a Special Topics course), and is open to all undergraduates and graduate students as an elective. No knowledge of Greek or Latin required.

NOTE: MATH 2010-990 is a live video streaming section. Students will log in to the live class using a computer at the same time MATH 2010-501 is scheduled. For minimum computer system requirements and additional information please go here: <https://help.webex.com/docs/DOC-4748> (you will need to copy/paste the link). The proctoring policy of this course may require you to attend an approved Testing Center. Please contact the instructor (cintronarias@etsu.edu) for questions concerning this policy. The methodology of choice in this section is known as "Flip the Classroom," where students are expected to have internet access regularly. Moreover, it is expected students do preparation work prior to each lecture, including: reading materials; watching video lectures; and answering online quizzes.

NOTE: The adopted textbook for MATH 2120-501 is Notes on Diffy Qs: Differential Equations for Engineers by Jiri Lebl. A free pdf-copy can be downloaded from the URL <http://www.jirka.org/diffyqs/> (you will need to copy/paste the link). Even though the textbook is free, students may be expected to purchase an online access code; instructions will be provided in the syllabus by the first week of classes. Students are expected to have internet access regularly (either on-campus or off-campus). Examinations will be proctored at the Testing Center, located on the first floor of the Charles C. Sherrod Library, at times outside the regular meeting times of this section. Students are strongly encouraged to bring a laptop or tablet to the classroom. Students wishing to live-stream the course must enroll in MATH 2120-990. Contact the instructor (cintronarias@etsu.edu) for questions or to make special arrangements.

This section is an online course. Students enrolling in 3000 and 4000 level College of Business courses must have completed a minimum of 48 semester credits prior to enrolling or obtain a waiver from the chairman of the department in which the course is offered. MGMT-3650-995 is a WebEx Online Classroom based live video streaming section. Students will log in to the live class using a computer at the same time MGMT-3650 section 201 is scheduled. For minimum computer system requirements and additional information please go to <https://help.webex.com/docs/DOC-4748> (you will need to copy/paste the link). Please be advised that for the 995 section you may be required to come to main campus for tests and presentations. Other requirements will be addressed by the professor. Recordings of each class session will be available via the course D2L page. Students wishing to attend a class-room section must enroll in another section of MGMT-3650.

SOWK 4957-002 Special Topic " Harry Potter & the Quest for Social Justice" Course Description: The social work profession places an emphasis on social justice and how social workers can recognize, advocate, and intervene on behalf of individuals, groups, and communities. This class will take a two-pronged approach in analyzing the Harry Potter books and movies as they relate to social justice. The first will look at the series as a work of fiction and how it relates to our muggle world and the experiences of muggles. The second approach will analyze the wizarding world within Harry Potter as a real social system in and of itself. As Sims (2012) states, "we purposely blur the distinction between life and art with the hope that, after viewing the latter sociologically [and through a social work lens], readers [and students] might begin viewing the former in the same manner" (p. 6). This class will provide an enchanted environment where students will learn to analyze 4 themes central to social work: 1) the intersectionality of cultural identity, 2) effects of trauma 3) systems of power and privilege, 4) and the change agent(s).

SOWK 4957-201 Special Topic "SELF-CARE FOR HELPING PROFESSIONALS" Course Description: This course will help students in the helping professions (social work, counseling, nursing, human services, ministry, psychology, education, etc.) prepare for an occupation that uses their own self as the primary method of change. The helping professions provide a tremendous sense of satisfaction and fulfillment to those who work in their respective fields, but the constant care for others also has the potential to deplete the helping professional's emotional, psychological, physical, and spiritual energy. Students will be introduced to several important concepts relative to their professional and personal well-being: self-care, compassion fatigue, burnout, secondary traumatization, and vicarious trauma. Additionally, students will be introduced to a number of instruments that will aid them in monitoring their professional and personal well-being. Most importantly, students will learn, and engage in, several evidence-based stress reduction practices that will aid them in maintaining longevity and satisfaction in their helping careers.

SOWK 4957-W01 Special Topic "INDIGENOUS APPROACHES TO ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE" Course Description: This interprofessional education course for social work, environmental health students, and students interested in environmental justice examines approaches to collaborative environmental justice using examples of Indigenous efforts and accomplishments in environmental preservation. Through this course students explore the impact environmental justice efforts have both locally and globally as well as the effect it has on all forms of life. Environmental justice is examined from ecosystems, policy, and environmental health perspectives. Students develop and implement interprofessional collaborative action plans to promote environmental justice. Additionally, students who are on a clinically focused track such as graduate students in social work, psychology or counseling explore the use of Indigenous methods in clinical practice with communities. This course is taught online, is asynchronous, and is open to undergraduates and graduates.

SOWK 4957-W03 Special Topic "Family Violence" Course Description: Violence is endemic in our society. This online elective course will focus on the occurrence of intrafamilial violence. Family Violence will help students obtain substantive information about family violence, foster an understanding of the magnitude of the problem and the devastation it can cause, and provide students with practical information on prevention and treatment. The general topics for the course have been chosen specifically to cover the arenas of violence experienced by family members, including the emotional, physical, and sexual abuse of children; adult survivors of childhood physical and sexual abuse; women who are battered by partners; battering in lesbian and gay relationships; sibling sexual abuse, and elder abuse. In addition, Family Violence addresses the treatment of offenders, specifically batterers and adult and juvenile physical and sexual offenders. Less empirically informed topics such as women who sexually abuse their children and women who batter their partners also will be explored and discussed. All issues and topics are considered within an historical and contemporary socio-cultural and political context. Sexism, racism, ageism and the stereotyping of various ethnic and cultural groups will be identified and discussed as they form and influence the context of family life. The myths of family violence will be identified and demystified. Issues of social and economic justice for clients will be addressed. Relevant research will be reviewed as it informs clinical social work practice and will be assessed for biases. Students are expected to become aware of their own biases and the potential impact on their practice. The course will examine the social construction of violence and the socio-cultural maintenance of violence as it informs treatment.

The myths of family violence will be identified and demystified. Issues of social and economic justice for clients will be addressed. Relevant research will be reviewed as it informs clinical social work practice and will be assessed for biases. Students are expected to become aware of their own biases and the potential impact on their practice. The course will examine the social construction of violence and the socio-cultural maintenance of violence as it informs treatment.*
