SOWK 4957-902 Special Topic "Indigenous Approaches to Environmental Justice" Course Description: This inter-professional education course for social work and environmental health students examines approaches to collaborative environmental justice using examples of Indigenous efforts and accomplishments in environmental preservation. The course explores the impact environmental justice efforts have both locally and globally as well as the effect it has on all forms of life. Environmental justice is examined from ecosystems, policy, and environmental health perspectives. Students develop and implement inter-professional collaborative action plans to promote environmental justice. This course is taught online and is asynchronous.

SOWK 5957-983 Special Topic "Indigenous Approaches to Environmental Justice" Course Description: This inter-professional education course for social work and environmental health students examines approaches to collaborative environmental justice using examples of Indigenous efforts and accomplishments in environmental preservation. The course explores the impact environmental justice efforts have both locally and globally as well as the effect it has on all forms of life. Environmental justice is examined from ecosystems, policy, and environmental health perspectives. Students develop and implement inter-professional collaborative action plans to promote environmental justice. This course is taught online and is asynchronous.
