Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of this session, the participant will be able to:

Discuss the importance of placing their internal evaluation in the context of the literature before pursuing data collection.

Define the term “fidelity” and describe its place in the study of an established model or intervention.

Discuss strategies for honing project ideas to make them “doable” in real world settings.

Discuss the importance of using established models and methods wherever possible.

Be inspired to contribute to science!
